BIOGRAPHY

A Previous winner of a BBC Song of the Year Competition, South African singer-songwriter and performer Ginni is a powerful talent not to be ignored. As an accomplished pianist, cellist and self-taught guitarist, Ginni has become very versatile in her song writing and performance. She is an incredible performer with a captivating affect on her audience. In her adopted hometown of Windsor, her fans affectionately describe her as a "sexy earth mother with a blissful voice and great songs".

After a successful career in Musical Theatre in South Africa, Ginni moved to the UK to pursue her dream of becoming a songwriter and pianist. However, with many challenges and without a piano to hand, she took to learning the guitar. After many shattered expectations and an expired return ticket home, she was urged by friends to start busking.

Since then Ginni has performed at various pubs, clubs and other music venues around the UK, as well as Amsterdam, California and South Africa. Her debut solo album 'Between These Walls', was released in June 2001 and she toured the UK solo and with her band. This album sold just over 2500 copies at gigs alone.

Ginni signed a recording deal with Madam Music in 2004 and has since been working on her album entitled "GINNI", which she recorded at Westside Studios and is due to be released in 2006.
